

Harold Gets $10,000 From Inglewood Lions (Pat Julian)

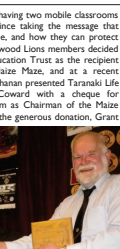

Above: George Buchanan presenting Grant Coward (and Harold) with a larger than life sized cheque for $10,000

Coward was appreciative of the Clubs efforts and how necessary such donations were to the work of the Trust with the two mobile classrooms operated by the Trust costing around $200,000 a year to run. These classrooms are fully air conditioned and use the most modern state of the art equipment such as a transparent mannequin, a talking brain, and modules showing the nervous, circulatory and nervous systems, all designed to help our children understand their unique bodies and how to protect them.

Right: Ken Lynch presents Grant Coward with a plaque in appreciation of his personal contribution to the trust.

 Sport dominates this issue. We have inundated with news from our sports groups. This also emphasises the important part sport plays in our lives. It is taken part by all sectors of our community, from the very young to those at the other end of the scale. We play sport for the opportunity to meet and socialise with others, and to exercise and maintain our bodies. The term healthy body, healthy mind holds a bit of weight. Team sport assists with the importance of learning that to advance we have to learn how to get on together and use our different skills for the betterment of all. Individual sports build self reliance and can teach us that sometimes there is no one to blame but ourselves. And yes, sometimes we just play for fun. Richard Jordan Editor

Shade-by the River
 I think it's Murphy's Law that says, if anything can go wrong, it will go wrong. It's the same law that guides a slice of bread and butter to fall on the floor butter side down. Anyway, I digress. Why is it that whenever I have to transact any important business over the telephone, my call is taken by an Asian person? If there were ten operators available, I feel that I would get to and to exercise and maintain our bodies. The term healthy body, healthy mind holds a bit of weight. Team sport assists with the importance of learning that to advance we have to learn how to get on together and use our different skills for the betterment of all. Individual sports build self reliance and can teach us that sometimes there is no one to blame but ourselves. And yes, sometimes we just play for fun. Richard Jordan Editor

Food for thought, eh?
 For many years I have had a hearing problem and three or four years ago started to admit it and got some hearing aids. They have improved my hearing and quality of life quite remarkably – as long as I remember to put them in my ears. But I still have problems with Asian accents. I think that they tend to speak quite quickly without much change in tone and I miss half of what they are trying to tell me. It often takes a good many "Could you repeat that please," before I have got the whole picture. So – if you are Asian and have to speak with me on the phone, you will have to be a bit patient with this old fella. Going back to my comment about racist remarks, don't you think that it is getting a bit over the top with some of the simple comments that are being branded as racist remarks?

Inglewood Premier Netballers Aim In Grand Final (Tracy White)

Burgess and Crowley Civil JURFC Premier 1 Netball Team is having another successful season in the Premier Taranaki Competition. Heading into semi finals Inglewood sat top of the table. Last week in the first semi-final they went down to Tyston's by a 14 goal margin but after a really great game against New Plymouth Old Boys winning by 52-24 in the second semi final, Inglewood secured their place in the Grand Final. The team have been really lucky this year to have retained many players from last years side including including: Heidi Smith, Sam Burkhardt, Erika Maifea (captain) Lauren Burgess, Jess Burkhardt, Jenna O'Sullivan (overseer as present), Lana Rowland Katherine Banks and Loren Dombroski. They also been fortunate to have added to the team this year Kersy Hayman, Nic Corrie, and Patsy Matheson. Also boosting the ranks is Min Zimmerman after having been away for a couple of seasons. The team would enjoy and really appreciate as many Inglewood supporters as possible at the Grand Final this Thursday the 21st August at 7.45 pm vs Waitara Tystons at the TSB Stadium. The girls all really enjoyed seeing the success of the Inglewood Community Netball League and would love to deliver a double title this year for the club and district.

All were in agreement that we attend Kamata's plant sale at Leah's and luncheon, then return to Maureen's home for our monthly meeting. Nola Verry's hand work won her class in Inglewood and was sent to Wellington for the National WI Conference.

 On the 6 August we had 24 students from IPS attend the Taranaki LEAD Conference Day in New Plymouth. Police Report (Aislaire Balson)
 Targeting the elderly, it has come to the Police's attention that some recent arrivals to our town are knocking on the doors of the elderly offering to clean windows and other odd jobs for cash. Once inside the price goes up and the work done is shoddy. We don't want this in our town, so keep any eye on your family friends and neighbours and call us if you see this happening. We know who they are and where they live. Usually it's a young male and female but there may be a third male as well. It is easiest just to deny them entry but they may appear intimidating. If they refuse to leave call 111.

Gardening Clues
 (With Sun From Hammer)
 Growing Potatoes Part I
 This time of year, gardeners are deciding what sort of seed potatoes to try in the garden, whether you are a dedicated 'Rus' spud follower or like to try several different sorts, now is the time to prepare your soil, and get your seed potatoes sprouting, so you'll be ready for planting. Traditionally potatoes are grown in rows, but you can grow them in mounds, tyres, tubs, and raised planters. The first step is to cultivate and turn the soil one last time before planting, removing any weeds, rocks or debris. This will loosen the soil and allow the plants to become established more quickly. Your potato plants will benefit from the addition of compost, well composted manure, and other organic matter to the soil. However, too much organic material can increase the chances of potato scab. To lessen the likelihood of potato scab, mix the organic matter into the soil below the potato seed, where it will feed the roots, but not contact the newly forming potatoes. Dig a shallow trench about 10cm wide and 15-20cm deep. The spacing at which you place the seed pieces will determine the harvest potato size. For most household uses, you will want to plant your potato seeds 40 cm apart in this trench. Place them into the trench and then cover them with 10cm of soil. Do not fill the trench in completely. Depending on the soil temperature, the sprouts will begin to emerge in about 2 weeks. At this time add another 10cm of soil. Your crop of potatoes will form between the seed potato and the surface of the soil. For this reason, when the stems are about 20cm high, you once again add enough soil to bring the level half way up the stem of the plant. You will need to repeat this 2-3 weeks later, at which time you again add soil half way up the stem of the plant. Keep topping up the soil, to ensure there is enough soil above the forming potatoes that they don't push out of the hill and get exposed to light. If the new potatoes are exposed to sunlight while they are developing, they will turn green. This green portion may be toxic. This method is necessary to create sufficient space for the potatoes to develop large tubers, and an abundant crop. If you cover up too much of the foliage, you may end up reducing your final crop yield. Next time we'll check out how to look after them as they grow. Happy gardening.
